STEVEN MUELLER is Director of Worker Development for the BC Forest Safety Council, responsible for worker training and certification programs.

Steve joined the council in 2006 with more than 20 years of forestry experience. His first job in the industry was a tree planter to pay his way through university. Later, he became a silviculture contractor with more than 500 employees on silviculture projects across Western Canada.

Steve began making safety a business priority in the 1990s, developing a safety management and training system that reduced his company's injury rates by 40 per cent over five years. He went on to become a fulltime safety consultant and certified woodlands and sawmill safety auditor.
